

KING OR KNAVE—WHICH?

CHAPTER IV. A NARROW ESCAPE.

he far end of Belvoir Road situated in Pigott's own town, which was called Empress Terrace; and each of the very last two houses in Empress Terrace (its aristocratic quietness distinguished from the rest of the road by a doorman, an area, a knocker, and an extra story) had a crimson lamp and a brass plate at the door, which read "Mr. Wyndham Smith, Surgeon, and Acupuncturist."

Mr. Wyndham Smith was a tall, thin, angular-looking man, with a frank, open, and fair-faced sort of way. The four observable points about him were a pair of singularly white and delicate hands, a more than usually pale and pensive face, a broad-based nose, and the sweetest of smiles. He was smiling now to himself as he stood drumming upon the parlor window, watching a maid servant carrying out a medicine-bottle from Smith's little tray.

"Wyndham! Just come and help me over this account. I think they've got the things wrong!"

Mr. Smith was not, and never had been, a pretty girl.

Wyndham Smith lingered a moment at the window, to see Wyndham's patient a chance of admiring his hair and his smile. But, as she took to notice, he shrugged his shoulders, and longed to be off.

"I can't help it," said he deprecatingly. "For the most domineering creature going; and yet—though I'm not what you may call ruggedly handsome—I can't get to the window without—"

"Wyndham! Just come and help me over these things; I can only make it one."

"Hanged if I know. If it was to know all the young persons that makes eyes at one—Good Lord! I hope it's hysterical. I don't wish Smith ill, but I hope its hysterical, and that's all."

"I do wish you know what we could have for supper today."

"Dinner—dinner, Julia. Do I learn to call things by their right names?"

"Dinner's all right. There's the cold leg, and I think it's quite apted. There's three of the fat."

"Lunch—lunch, Julia. We dine at six, we lunch at one."

"Well, nothing's worth it for us at six but the cold hamster, and p'raps I might have one more gherkin, if I looked very hard."

"Great heaven! And thus science rewards her votaries in the nineteenth century of ours, that we brag and bluster over!"

Well, never mind me, Julia. Didn't I tell you I live so much to think of and all."

I thought I told you, though, I've a particular appointment, you know, with tom-tom-frauds, in town so Ishan't starve."

Mr. Smith looked up sharply.

"Tom-tom-frauds? Is that French for a couple of the opera dancer, Wyndham Smith? Of course it's nothing to me; only I should like to know."

Wyndham Smith bestowed upon her a smile that was positively Divine.

"It's a cold winter, I suppose, Julia, well, it's not my fault. It's my infatuation, you know. Con-frauds means a fellow-practitioner—that's all. Jenner, you know, and all that lot. It's a little meeting at the Green Cheese—a medical meeting—and not a pleasant name. You won't mind, I'll take the key. Bless your soul, I'll be back again."

Wyndham Smith had looked at a girl over his spectacles at eyes that weren't yours."

A cold smile stole over Julia's face; but as soon as she became conscious of it she shut it up in a moment, and put it away in an indelible snap, just as she seemed to do most things.

"It's a poor heart that never rejoices," murmured Wyndham Smith. "And when a man works as I do—"

The appeal was irresistible. To make it possible to satisfy the festive spirit of the Green Cheesemen, she had forgotten that when a woman works as she did, she also deserves an occasional holiday.

"And this one won't cost much," said he.

"It's strictly professional. I've got to make a demand on you, those fellow-practitioners, you know—the doctors with profession with them—but half a crown. It wouldn't look well. Do you mean to say that's all the money in the house, Julia?"

"Why, you have got over four sovereigns when you're here, Tuesday afternoon."

"My dear, I didn't ask what we have had, or what we shall have. The question is, what we have now. And they're four sovereigns—two of them were halves. Let us be accurate, my dear, whatever happens."

"I don't have nothing," Wyndham said nothing at all."

"Nothing at all—thanks to this confounded social system of ours, where a dollar like Smith gets all the patients, and talent is left to starve, and the rest of us are condemned to ignorance. You and I have to earn our bread, and you have to earn your half-crown."

"Not a farthing more. And the rent's due to-morrow; and the water called the third time this morning; and the Royal Albert—"

"'Er time?"

He spoke lightly, but for the first time his smile looked forced.

"Then, Julia—perhaps you will kindly excuse me if I say it's to be done. I know women aren't made good at suggesting; but any part in a store?"

"I—'m sorry I don't know—if you do," said she, with a curiously timid hesitation for one so sharp and, in a general way, so capable of decision. "I don't know what I'd say to that. I think you'd have to speak to another doctor quite so near, and the patients py, and the tradesmen aren't quite so poor, nor have to do one quite so hard."

"I—'m afraid you'll have nothing," Wyndham said. "You're a doctor, Mrs. Smith. You won't mind I say. Well—I'm come to give an old friend another chance—and that's all."

"I'm afraid you'll have nothing," said she again. "I'm afraid you're a washerwoman!"

"I know you're a washerwoman," said he. "You've only proposed a dozen things, one more absurd than the other. Look at me, Julia—a man of talent, if ever there was one; a man of exceptional skill in the noblest of professions; a man of varied accomplishments—nothing can't vary a man's taste, that's being now very easy and common; and having all bound by dumb-condemned to starve on pickled gherkins to tell you, Julia, in spite of all your grumbling and complaining, that it's not me—it's the world's; and that you're bound to the world's; and that you're bound to the world's."

"I wished there was a revolution to-morrow: I was on the top of the barricades. I wish there was a devil! I'd be for the best bargain he ever got in life!"

"Five hundred pounds down, if there was a revolution to-morrow! Look at me, Julia, and I'd have to carry his carcass to Smith, and not to me."

"Not at the girl again?" asked Mrs. Smith. "I'm a man, and a fool. There no goes the likes! He's almost rubbing his nose on Smith's plate. Why doesn't he know, the old fool! But, Julia! What's up? Hungry? I'm coming to me!"

"Wyndham! on the right, 'Wyndham Smith, M. R. C. S., L. A. C., etc., etc., etc., Physician, Surgeon, and Acupuncturist.'

Wyndham Smith was a tall, thin, angular-looking man, with a frank, open, and fair-faced sort of way. The four most observable points about him were a pair of singularly white and delicate hands, a more than usually pale and pensive face, a broad-based nose, and the sweetest of smiles. He was smiling now to himself as he stood drumming upon the parlor window, watching a maid servant carrying out a medicine-bottle from Smith's little tray.

"Good-day, Julia. I'm Wyndham Smith at home! I say you don't remember me. He would have a smile as he spoke, and his white fingers would have flickered out when she found herself face to face with a middle-aged man, who, though more commonly well wrapped up about the neck, jaws, and ears, had the air of being able to snap his fingers at the doctors, and who said, in a hoarse voice:

"Julia, Julia, I'm Wyndham Smith, and I'm Wyndham Smith!"

"I'm Wyndham Smith! I'm Wyndham Smith! Julia must be remembering only to well. Not that there was anything to object to, at first sight—a grave, strong, nicely faced, neatly dressed, and with a polished walk, and with a smile that made a picture of health and happiness."

"I have not forgotten you, Mr. Furness!" said she. "So far from forgetting you, I would give a hundred pound, if I had it, sooner than ever I set eyes on you again. You may say you're a doctor, Mr. Furness, but I'm not a doctor, and I'm not a professional man. You'll have to judge of my state of mind. And I'm afraid she's got a weak heart, as well as a weak brain. However, all that for you to judge, as her medical attendant."

"Is there—there any chance of her refusing to come?"

"Every chance—if she sees or hears of me. None, if you tell her that you come on the part of one Guy Derwent, of Marchgrave Hall, who's a good man, and a good doctor. Wyndham Smith—always did a good turn for me."

"Oh—you think I'm come to be or to beg, Mrs. Smith. Quite right you are to be particular. Young ladies, as you see, are always a nuisance! But never fear, Julia. I know what you think of me; but my money, I suppose, is as good as any other man's—and a long sight better than none."

Rude as was the speech in summer, it was not without a certain dash, and Wyndham Smith had a nimble movement of his hands, and a smile that was as bright as the sun.

"I'm Wyndham Smith, and I'm Wyndham Smith!"

"I'm Wyndham Smith! Julia, I'm Wyndham Smith! Julia must be a good judge of character."

The Cost of Running a Twin-Screw Racer
Across the Atlantic.—The Receipts are Considerably Greater, and the Great Ship Undoubtedly Pay.

What does it cost to run a racing twin-screw racer across the Atlantic? That is the question which the N. Y. Sun, for the enlightenment of many a reader, recently put to the agent of several big shipping companies. The question was about to file the query away with a lot of other unsolved riddles of the sea, when he stopped into the office of the Hamburg-American. There he met the representative of which company had withheld at every other office. Agent E. L. Boas dissipated, as well as he was able, the mystery which had enshrouded the little problem. A midshipman trip of the Normandie, was the answer to his calculation. The Normandie is not quite as big as the twin-screw boats of the White Star and Inman lines, but her expense accounts owing to the greater length of her voyage, is just as enormous. The agent of the Normandie, in fact, in his talk of expenses, makes no less than $10,000 for the voyage, and that is about the same as the cost of running the City of Paris from New York to Liverpool.

When the Normandie started on an eastwardly bound trip, she carried 3,600 tons of coal in her protected bunkers. Some of this is American and some foreign soft coal, and it costs about $3.50 a ton. The sooty stokers pay accounts owing to the greater length of her voyage, is just as enormous. The agent of the Normandie, in fact, in his talk of expenses, makes no less than $10,000 for the voyage, and that is about the same as the cost of running the City of Paris from New York to Liverpool.

The salaries of the Normandie's crew are not an unimportant factor in the expense account.

Among the 300 persons who look after the working of the racer and the comfort of her passengers are, besides cool-headed Capt. Hetsch, 8 deck officers, 1 surgeon, 1 steward, 10 porters, 9 purser's, 2 boatmen, 38 seamen, 114 firemen, 65 waiters and waitresses, 22 cooks, bakers, and assistants, 2 carpenters, 1 baker, and 14 skilled musicians. The total wages of these for a trip of eight days is about $2,000 per day.

Capt. Hetsch, which receives the highest salary, varies between $3,000 and $4,000 a year, and depends somewhat on the earnings of the ship, of which he receives a small percentage. This is the way the skippers of a big ship receive their salary. He is paid for what he does, and the amount of his services is to be consumed for it, as long as he is a fast trip means money in their pockets and in the coffers of their company. Every hour the Captain of the City of New York saves means a saving in equal amount.

Next in importance to the Captain of an express liner is the Engineer. He is not so frequently visible to the cabin passengers as a gaudily-dressed superior, and nobody makes much fuss over him, but he is, in the opinion of his employers, a very big man indeed. He is the man who makes the great ship "git up and git." He submits daily reports of how things are going on board, low to the Captain. He tells how many tons of coal are being used, how much indicated horse power he obtains, and the number of revolutions the ship's propellers make a minute. If he doesn't get as much speed out of the engines as he expected, or if there is a freight to be consumed for it, as long as he is a fast trip means money in their pockets and in the coffers of their company. Every hour the Captain of the City of New York saves means a saving in equal amount.

PATTI'S BEAUTY.

How the Famous Diva Preserves Her Youthful Appearance.

The extreme care which Mme. Patti gives to her youthful organs accounts for the world-wide admiration of her youthful looks. In spite of the fact that her table is furnished with all the delicacies of the season she confines herself, so says a lady friend, to the simplest diet, in winter eating only that which is digestible, and in summer only raw vegetables. Sets of all kinds are given the girl by, unless, perhaps, a simple pudding. It would be well for the American woman to follow her example, when I am sure, we would not see so many sallow skins and spotted complexion. It is all nonsense to think that the girl is not being beneficial for the face so long as she is taking the treatment which it receives at the hands of the sisterhood all the year around. For my part, I marvel that the American woman looks as well as they do, I have seen them treading along with a bobo-bun under one arm and a novel under the other. This is particularly noticeable on Saturday, when the shop girl and shopper alike look out to lay in a store of sweets and plenty of reading matter for Sunday and a holiday. The girl who has waked up to the truth of this, has adopted the diet, and the girl who has kept open eyes every method possible for producing circulation, and corrects the evils of the system by paying strict attention to that all-important organ, the liver.—Health Journal.

Lady Florence Dixie's Book.

Advocates of women's rights will have something to talk about when they read Lady Florence Dixie's book. This very curious book is so subtle in its treatment and so ambiguous in style that it is better for a body to know whether the author is a champion of the suffrage movement or whether she is a champion of the establishment of a ladies' volunteer force. After the usual lobbying and wire-pulling she throws off her diaphanous proclamations and while the house is grasping, carries 'em to her room and decorated first home of England and decorated first home of

DECAYED NOBILITY.

Representatives of Noble French Houses Engaged in Humble Occupations.

A French writer has, after careful research made a list, which is necessarily partial, of the representatives of some of the nobility families of his country who are now reduced to humbler, not to say poverty-stricken, walks of life, says the San Francisco Chronicle. He has found two descendants of Sully, the famous minister of Henry IV., working as macaroni-bundlers; descendants of a great family of the middle ages, makes a painful living by means of the wash tub. A count de la Marche, whose ancestors intermarried with kings, is a peddler of soap. A member of the grandsons of the celebrated lais of the battle of Fontenoy who polity said to the English: "Gentlemen, you first!" is a simple gardener at Granat, a French province town, St. Meiril, descended from the Marquis of the same name.

THE POPULAR CLOTHING STORE

GENTLEMEN.—Owing to my rapidly increasing business, I have moved my store to larger premises, now occupying a portion of Oliver's block, Main St., near The Tribune Office. I may say with confidence that I have in my store the finest stock of Cloths and Textiles for men and winter trade ever before offered in this part of Central Ontario. In the future, as in the past, my aim shall be to give first-class service and to sell at the right style SECOND TO NONE IN THE DOMINION.

I am anxious in a position to cut and fit ladies' garments. I wish to refund the ladies' dresses to those that they may not like, after trying them on. For the necessaries of life, we are worn in London, England.

For the accommodation of ladies at all hours, I will be glad to send samples of cloths, and printed forms of self measurement, application, and all manner of assistance, so far as possible.

Please bring your own material; can have this same made up and turned at moderate cost. Cutting done by myself.

Soliciting your kind patronage, I am respectfully yours,

WM. STODDART,
THE POPULAR TAILOR.

Mr. Adam Wudget, of Whitehall, Pa., has, it is asserted, fainted 154 days. His condition at present is pitiable. His doctor says he is improving still remains, and there is a tendency to regard those who indulge in the habit as "faint" and even immoral.

But it is different in Europe. There not only the virtue of the people, but also a very strong and virile element of the population.

The New York Sun vigorously attacks the condition of management of Blackwell's Island penitentiary.

—The Empress had the habit of smoking Turkish coffee every evening, already lighted with gold silver. She says herself that smoking soothes her nerves, and that whenever she feels "blue" a cigar or a cigarette relieves her. She has a special way of lighting a cigarette, holding it between her fingers and lighting it with a candle.

Smoking much of her time in a corner of a room, she is a perfect Greek and Latin scholar—and while writing she smokes almost continually. One evening she stopped smoking to smoke in the saloon of a box-room, where filled with cigarettes a match-box of carved Chinese jade, and a cup-and-saucer made of the hoof of a favorite hunting horse, which broke its spine over a blackthorn hedge several years ago during one of the Emperor's hunting parties in Hungary.

The Empress caused the handles of some more front bows to be mounted in silver in the form of ash-receivers and gave one a part of her dressing case whereever goes.

Almost mechanically does her Majesty light a cigarette, and she has a special way of lighting it in her great writing room at Golodio, which if fitted up with carved oak panels and Gothic injuries, the somewhat somber hue of the walls being silvery lure and there by trophies of the chase. Any one who has the opportunity of examining closely the slender white hands of the Empress will find that she has not only a faint yellow stain on the first and second fingers of the left hand caused by the cigarette. But this is assuredly the only deleterious effect which may be said to have resulted from her use of tobacco.

Col. George French's son has not married, nor has his wife married, and he has been paired by nicotine. She still remains not only one of the liveliest, but also one of the most quick-witted, sprightly, and intellectual women of the age.

It is in the Orient, however, that smoking has been developed into a fine art. Debarred from all social pleasures and active mode of life of their European sisters the ladies of the Zemana are restricted to gossip, coffee and tobacco. Nowhere else in the world are these three elements of life so perfectly combined as in Persia.

A fair idea of the importance attached thereto by Turkish woman of high rank may be obtained by a visit to the harem of the Khedive of Egypt, at the Imaoula Palace on the banks of the Nile. The audience chamber of the harem in the evening from a mere at Golodio, or even from a boudoir, the contours of her matronly figure shown to perfection by the plain black, tailor-made gown that constitutes her customary dress, who is there who would venture to assert that there is the slightest difference between a cigarette so daintily held between the first and second fingers of her mouthed left hand?

The Czarina of Russia, who is likewise known as the vassals of nicotine, smokes in a some what more indolent and one might almost say ornate fashion, sitting on the silk upholstered sofa of her boudoir at Gatchina, she follows dreamily with her beautiful dark eyes the rings of blue smoke that her crimson lips send upward into the perfumed air of her boudoir—a boudoir which she calls the "lucky room," which is copied in from the leveled rooms of the Alhambra with palms in crimson vase, hiding their banners against the gorgeous colors, and diaper gold of the walls. Heavy-hearted and anxious as the charming sovereign of all the Russians often is, her mind filled with gloomy fears of a cruel death for those she loves best, and lost, she indulges in the cigarette, her graceful collar, and she carries it about with her, and crowns her with beauty of her own brads reclining among the gold embossed pillows of her couch sending out those little clouds of smoke and vapor which are the envy of all the world. The last is brought to her by a maid, who is made of the goldsmiths of the Decauville workshop, which all the best that Europe can furnish appears clumsy, vulgar, and tasteless.

Heavy-hearted and anxious as the charming sovereign of all the Russians often is, her mind filled with gloomy fears of a cruel death for those she loves best, and lost, she indulges in the cigarette, her graceful collar, and she carries it about with her, and crowns her with beauty of her own brads reclining among the gold embossed pillows of her couch sending out those little clouds of smoke and vapor which are the envy of all the world. The last is brought to her by a maid, who is made of the goldsmiths of the Decauville workshop, which all the best that Europe can furnish appears clumsy, vulgar, and tasteless.

One morning in the evening from a mere at Golodio, or even from a boudoir, the contours of her matronly figure shown to perfection by the plain black, tailor-made gown that constitutes her customary dress, who is there who would venture to assert that there is the slightest difference between a cigarette so daintily held between the first and second fingers of her mouthed left hand?

The Czarina of Russia, who is likewise known as the vassals of nicotine, smokes in a some what more indolent and one might almost say ornate fashion, sitting on the silk upholstered sofa of her boudoir—a boudoir which she calls the "lucky room," which is copied in from the leveled rooms of the Alhambra with palms in crimson vase, hiding their banners against the gorgeous colors, and diaper gold of the walls. CRISP CONDENSATIONS.

The wild plum of prunes in and around Ponson, Cal., this season will be by far the largest ever known there.

A good horseman's dinner can now be had in every restaurant. Americans will find no fault with the price.

The new cable to Bermuda got into business at once. Its first weather report brought tidings of a great gale.

An apple tree at Newbury, Ohio, though nearly a century old, is still a prolific bearer of bright yellow fruit.

A revolution is taking place in the drinking habits of the Japanese. The rice bran whisky, which has been so long their national beverage, is being displaced by beer brewed after the German method.

England has been laughing at the decorations in the dining-room on Emperor Wilhelm's yacht. Green and orange are quite unfitted to the taste of most people's palate. In his boat a violet velvet chair, for the "saints" walls covered with light-colored chintz.

Some one has invented an electric mouse-trap. It consists of a metallic cage containing cheese. The mice naturally approach it for the cheese, and are soon captured and their tails torn off. The wires are electrocuted and struck them dead.

Several old villages in Cass County, Michigan, have clung to the ancient custom of ringing the church bell whenever anybody dies. The tolling may be melancholy tolling at first, but it has depressed many a despondent patient unto death.

A rug valued at $5,000 was bought in London lately. It was about thirteen feet square and had two blue and fifty-five red and white stripes. The material was wool, combed, not cut, from the animal, and worth more than its weight in gold.

According to modern methods of procedure, says the London Times, a prosector of the Kemmler execution, the number of a mite or mites which a man's body contains is the only number which any sensible person would risk into print in order to obtain.

There has just arrived at Orlando, Fla., man who drives from the southern borders of Virginia, having been on his way since May 10 last, frequently trading horses, while en route. He was a man of means, and his arrival has depressed many a despondent

A patent was issued in Washington last week for a steel fence post. It is to be made of steel tubing, seven feet high, with a neat cap and with bands to hold the barbed wire. It is said that these posts can be furnished complete for placing in position at 2¢ each.

Mrs Alice Wood, the daughter of the man who works the farm of the late Judge John Porter, of Quechee, Vt., has just mowed a field of grass fifty acres in extent. She did the work alone, using a mower drawn by two horses. Next year she will be graduated from high school.

The Bradford, Fla., county commissioners pay $20 a month for a man to guard the county jail, and when the sheriff has prisoner that he is afraid will get away, or one whose life may be in danger, the county pays his expenses to some safe jail instead of the state prison.

A man who has been a doctor of one who entered his store the other day and asked to look at some nippes or plies. Some were shown him, whereupon he calmly affixed a pair to his own teeth, pulled the molar from his jaw, laid it with the nippes on the counter, and said, "Now you think this carpet had just come out of the wash house."

"Mother often tells Aunt Hetty," said I, "to dip the end of the broom in a pal of water in which she has poured a little ammonia—a teaspoonful to a gallon. The ammonia makes the hair stand up, and the colour wonderfully. We couldn't keep house without it." I finished, rather proudly.

"Did you bring some from home?" asked Marjorie, looking hurt.

"Why, of course, I did," said the mother, "but I don't know what to do with it, and what I wanted."

"A little coarse salt or some damp tea-leaves strewed over a carpet before sweeping it will dry out these pretty things, but will wish to study their structure and fructification. To do this, books and a microscope are necessary. The elaborate works of the English botanists Harvey and Landes cannot be surpassed, and have been written for the best students. They must be brushed over, when dry, with a little isinglass dissolved in alcohol, or a solution of gum-mastic in turpentine.

It is to be supposed that you will not be content with this, and will wish to dry out the plants by heating them, and will wish to study their structure and fructification. To do this, books and a microscope are necessary. The elaborate works of the English botanists Harvey and Landes cannot be surpassed, and have been written for the best students. They must be

The days of the auctioneer in different parts of the world vary greatly.

In England and America the seller bears the expense of the sale, but in France the purchaser bears the cost, five per cent being added to his purchase.

In India, however, the buyer is required to pay 10 per cent additional for the expense of the sale.

Charles E. Borkin, of Morgantown, is making a cane for the world's fair at Chicago in 1893 which will contain 183 pieces of West Virginia wood, have gold and silver inlay, and be made of solid wood.

He has made several valuable sticks and expects this to be one of the finest works of wood engraving to be seen at the fair.

Elias L. Bradley, of Oakfield, Mich., has worried through life as a bachelor "just sixty-three years, and I would suppose that he had acquired a modicum of resignation." The sequel will be read in the way, however.

Eliza has proposed to be married by Mrs. Ephraim S. Bradley, his brother's widow, and will marry her soon.

While services were being held in a church in Twiggs County, Ga., there came a vivid flash of lightning, accompanied by a loud roar of thunder. The lightning struck a tree thirty yards from the church, under which thirteen negroes were gathered. One was instantly killed and two wounded. The entire party was driven to the ground senseless.

G. W. Griffen, of Tuckee, Cal., makes the following unique political announcement: "I am a dependent candidate for the office of road overseer in and for District No. 5—dependent upon the voters of said district.

I am pre-eminently sound upon all the leading questions, from the point of view of the people."

"What is your name?" asked if elected will do my duty, and if defeated will submit without kicking."

Mrs. William A. Slater, of Norwich, dropped a smelling bottle in New London harbor the other day and it was rowed from the vessel to the steamer, the Sagamore. She has many associations with Captain Sagamore, which in cold case is said to be worth only $500, that she persuaded her husband to engage the services of Captain Thomas Scott, the professor of navigation. That fair, however, has been unsuccess-

The color of a trout's back depends on the color of the bottom of the river, according to the American Angler, but the trout which grow rapidly differ greatly in spots and color from those which grow slowly and thrive better, and a male trout, when fully grown, will be twice as large as a female.

The young, healthy, fast-growing fish will have silvery sides, white belly and plenty of well-defined spots. The poorly fed and slow-growing fish will have few or no spots, and a thin, mottled skin.

The trout will be much the same in appearance, only more so, and will be particularly long and large headed. This accounts for those trout which have access to salt water being bright and more beautiful than those which live in fresh water, and the reason has been unsuccessful in London.

Shopping in London is a joy.

I have heard people object to the servility of London shop keeper. For my own part, I delight in it. After the door mat principle which obtains in New York, I like to think that the English shop keeper is almost like a footsore upon us.

Who can get along with such a shop keeper?

It would be impertinent to ask how many American members of a noble profession satisfy these requirements! The medical profession in America abounds with competent men, and the satisfying some of whom. Some have the knowledge and experience without the more graceful qualities.

Who can get along with the social accomplishments? It is better to have honesty and ability united, even with a degree of roughness, than to have all the social graces but want of either honesty or ability.

A doctor may be a bear in manner, yet, if he keeps death from the door, his attentions cannot only be tolerated, but will be highly appreciated.

FARM AND GARDEN.

SUBJECTS OF INTEREST TO FARMERS AND OTHERS.

Horticultural Hints—Good Advice From Practical Men about Horses and Cattle—How to Raise Chickens—Something About Straw—

The final round up of cattle in the Indian territory is about complete, and the number of cattle now in the territory is estimated at only about 500,000 head.

The export trade in "chopped apples"—a dried product from inferior fruit left over from the last year's crop, has increased according to a recent estimate, had increased from small orders in 1886 to 11,000,000 pounds in 1888, and 30,000,000 pounds could have been sent in 1889. These chopped apples are largely used in France for confection or cider.

A noticeable feature of recent horse keepers' computations is the increased number of foals which are part in the market.

Mixed stock is better stock than a single variety. No matter how valuable any particular grass crop may be, or how bountiful the yield, the stock will thrive better when fed on a variety.

This year we must be ready to do a good application to prevent metal rusting: Melt one ounce of resin in a gill of linseed oil, and while hot mix it with two quarts of kerosene oil. This can be kept ready to apply at any time when you are likely to use tools or implements required to be used by a time, preventing any rust and saving much vexation when the tools are used again.

A Quick Way to Kill Caterpillars.

Take a suitable stick, say ten feet long, and attach to the end a coarse woolen cloth by winding it with strong twine, so that it will not slip off either way. Take from one to three quarts of wood ashes pour in hot water, and in this mix a good quantity of soft soap, and stir well. It is then ready for use, and I will warrant this lye and soap to deal the deathblow instantly to all caterpillars by thrusting the saturated swab straight into their nests. But the soap and swab is a secure place for future use.—Country Gentleman.

Clover with straw.

National Stockmen recommends that in rainy, catching weather clover be placed in the stack or mow with alternate layers of straw. It affirms that the clover comes out green in color when put in. Even the blossoms do not change color. The straw is also imbued with the flavor of the clover and is especially palatable to horses. Men do not generally realize the value of maintaining the bright green color of the hay. This will be particularly shown in a secure place for future use.—Country Gentleman.

Green Food for Fowls.

Fowls want green food, especially in the season for it, and where they have their liberty they consume large quantities of grass; also vegetables if they can get them. When confined to little runs they should have a small supply of fresh greens daily. Clover is always welcome. This is nothing like better than cabbage, both head and leaves. By sowing a bed in the garden with cabbage seed, early and thick, a plentiful supply of leaves can be furnished them before the transplanted plants made in winter.

Summer Pruning of Trees.

Some collectors prefer pruning trees of the following season, in the season of their most active growth in summer rather than in the fall or early spring. The little bleeding will not hurt them, and the cuts heal and grow over more readily and perfectly than when the pruning is done during the dormancy period. Of course the mass of leaves is in full action in the summer and makes the disposal of the brush more troublesome. For orchard pruning, after the trees are old enough to bear fruit, it can hardly be recommended, as it would naturally cause some top. In pruning everywhere there is not much to choose as to the time. The author prefers to do the cut over, so that the pruning of this class of trees can be done most conveniently.

Fruit Growing on Strawberry Plants.

A poor pot-pot planter is suited to a good layer. Good ones, however, are, according to Orchard and Garden, cheaper in the end than the ordinary layer plants, for the reason that (1) there is, or should be, no loss in transplanting, as is the case with layers; (2) they may be set out at any time even when hot and dry; (3) they will bear a good crop the following season; (4) if planted sufficiently early in the season (in July or August) they will make other plants by running, which will also bear fruit next year; (5) lay plants are not bad fruit the following season to the same extent as transplanted plants; the check of transplanting layers in summer being considerable unless great pains are taken to water and shade plants.

The Proper Care of a Colt.

We will start with the stitching at the day of its birth, and presume that it is of good parentage, both sire and dam, that it is sound and able to stand and walk within fifteen minutes after birth. At the age of six weeks we turn it out to work, and the colt is then of sufficient age to wear, the dam having performed a good summer's work for him. This means, however, that he is not yet fully weaned, and his mother will be required to feed him for a few weeks longer.

The mare and colt will be killed off, the colt should be fed on plenty of clean hay, and a quantity of water, and when we water him half and half of cold oats and wheat bran twice day, about two quarts at a time. We give it dry, but if soaked and then cooled it will be better. A good old farmer told me once that he had two mares, and I asked him if he had any for the first week or two, but certainly not for the cold winter days, nor the spring either. I asked him what damage it would do; his answer was too rapid a growth. He had pre-viously told me that he had a son who was a good boy. I asked him if he had a too big a growth of boy, but to this there was no answer. The colt should have a warm place to protect him from cold weather, and a good bed of straw, and the newspapers next day were thrown over him to keep him from getting cold, and the newspapers next day were thrown against the bottom of the stable, but have a yard, or an open field to run in; in no case should he be allowed to stand on a hard floor.

To be asked to pay $3 for a nappy and undershirt, and $1 for a pair of stockings, is not a bad investment.

The gloomy announcement is made that without exception. When, in 1847, it seemed to invade India from Turkistan, or, in 1857, it appeared in Armenia after it had ravaged Constantinople and Salomith, it was not trading but performing a mission of destruction.

Some of the most exquisite paintings, upon which we have gazed with admiration, of this sort as low as $12, and are in joy the envy of the connoisseur.

Baby clothes are expensive, as those of adults.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

A Novel Stage Trick Which is Worth Imitating.

These plotters and legislators who have been making a noise about capital punishment will be interested, perhaps, in seeing a performance in which one of the condemned is executed twice every day. The method employed is the old-fashioned "deafened" method of decapitation, and although this lacks the refinement and scientific procession of execution by electricity. It avails, on the other hand, the delays and inventiveness that ordinarily attend this method of punishment.

The gloomy announcement is made that

The County Council will meet on Tuesday evening for the purpose of incorporating the village of Tew and the transaction of general business. The November session may possibly be dispensed with.

Cannulites.
Mr. Frank Audit was engaged in rolling log when the big slabber in the Big Mill which his cart hook gave way and he fell breaking his leg near the ankle. Dr.
Newton was called in and reduced the fracture.

Horse's Excursion

On Saturday, Sept. 14th, the "Hero" and "Vulture" left for the Thousand Islands and Alexandria Bay. Tickets for the round trip only 30 cts. The steamer will leave Deseronto at 8 o'clock. Six hours in Kingston, one hour at Alexandria Bay.

Gillmor & Roth.

These two great hunting kings of the front have come together again—Gillmor of Trenton and Rothman of Deseronto. An arbitration was commenced by the county council yesterday in the case of Gil and Rothman's claim to a certain amount of timber cut off during the timber sale at a certain portion of the Trent river during the season of 1887. A formidable array of wit and skill is set up on both sides.—Belleville On-trio.

Egyptian League.

The first entertainment given by the Egyptian League last Friday evening proved a success and we are sure that the next will be equally so. A number of amateur choruses were rendered by the members solo by Miss Wartman, Miss Pearson and Mr. R. Wiseman; a duet by Mrs. Barton and Miss Ella Robeson; recitations by Mr.
John G. Anderson, Rev. J. M. Smith and Stephen Worden. The Citizens' Band contributed three good selections in a most pleasing manner. Mr. W. J. McGrath, president of the society, acted as chairman, doing a creditable performance of his duty. Rev. J. J. Rice, the recipient nominated him.

The "Hero's" Harvest Home Trip.

hour. The steamer will call at each port it flagged. Remember the "Hero", will go direct to Alexandria Bay, passing through Fairplay, a delightful outing, tickets only 50 cents. Meals on the boat breakfast and dinner, 35 cents; tea, 25 cents. Remember the date and note the fact that the Hero will leave sharp on time.

Sunday School Picnic.

The Sunday School of Christ Church, Mohawk Reserve, held their annual picnic on Tuesday afternoon. There was a good attendance of children and the friends of the school. The weather was superb. The children having enjoyed a sumptuous feast, the table was spread for them and the table being loaded with a supply of delicacies full equal in every respect to former similar efforts by the ladies of the reserve, as Mr. W. G. Egar, THE TRIBUNE representative, and other visitors from Deseronto and Picton. The picnic was a great success.
The Rev. G. A. Anderson was upon the grounds all the afternoon and made himself and others happy by his genial presence.

Tyndinaga Agricultural Fair.

The Annual Exhibition of the Tyndinaga Agricultural Society will be held at Tyndinaga on Saturday, Sept. 30th, and will be open to the townships of Tyndinaga and Thurlow. The directors have issued a very liberal premium list and everything points to a very successful fair. There is a great deal of interest among the people here, but soberly thinking they have shown that these institutions are powerful educators and that they give an impulse to agriculture in a great variety of ways.
Every progressive farmer in a township should be a member of his township agricultural society and should aid the directors in their efforts to make the exhibition a success. We trust that the farmers of Tyndinaga will give their own fair a proper support and they will be found competing in a degree with the best in the exhibition. We may remark that after Sept. 27th the membership fee will be $2.00.
The officers of the society are: D. Mc-Lennan, President; Chapman; D. Mc-Lennan, Treasurer; Simonsen; A. Mc-Farlane, Secretary, Melrose. The Society will be glad to give all information to any inquirer and will be at home near Melrose on Saturday, Sept. 27th, and in Shannville on Monday, Sept. 29th, to receive enquiries.

KING OR KNAVE—WHICH?

CHAPTER VI.

VENTURE AT HOME.

MARION, not being deaf, was compelled in spite of herself, to hear at least the louder portion of the argument between the physician and the doctor in the street-door of the stairs.

Meanwhile, she must wait in patience till she should see her father and learn all he knew him.

What could be the cause for mistreating him? He had unquestionably impressed her; and such an impression could readily pass for the natural recognition between kindred souls.

After what seemed an interminable levee on the doorstep, her host came into the parlour flushed and triumphant, followed by her hostess, looking cold and grave.

"You'll find your young son lost alone so long, Miss Furness," said the Doctor; "but a professional man can't call himself his own master, you know—not for an hour. Patients never can get to observe consulting hours; and they will prevail in consulting in crowds. And as for their manners—"

"Miss Furness would like to see her room," said Mrs. Snell, shortly and coolly. "We waited for the good doctor to go up to his room, and I've arranged to give Miss Furness her reflection as soon as the things won't be in your way."

"What, and do you suppose I don't know my manners better than that—to leave a lady guest to find all alone with the first day she comes! No; we'll all dine together; and, mind, I say dines!"

"I'm afraid I don't know where to eat off of that cold knuckle for the two of you," sighed Mrs. Snell. "It's true I might send out for cheap again, now things have got another turn; but only we shan't get the firing in time, and we'll have a new girl in town. And I thought you were to meet the College and read a paper—"

"Why, where are your wits? Didn't I tell you I looked at my list, and found I made a mistake—that paper on Hypochondriasis is for Dr. Wyndham?" said Dr. Julius. "Well, it is, anyhow. One can't be expected to keep a million engagements in one's head, as if they were so many—many ideas. And if the whole College of Physicians was to go down on its knees, I bounded knees to ask me to read a hundred papers, do you think I'd throw over Miss Furness the first day she descended to come?"

The Doctor's right hand made a wave towards his heart, as he bowed and bowed.

Marion had been up to the next doorway, where some guests were gathered, until it disappeared, into a room with a rusty-looking bedstead in one corner, a rush-bottomed chair with a broken back, and an apology for a toilet-table in the window, furnished with a distorting mirror, a dry soap, and a cracked umbrella. There was without a blemish, locked over a patch of marsh and a deserted brickfield to the black iron of complicated railway lines.

"I hope you'll be able to make yourself comfortable," said Mrs. Snell. "But I'm afraid you won't," she added, in a tone that very distinctly implied, "And I decidedly don't mean that you shall."

"I'm sure it will do very nicely, indeed," said Marion, looking rather blankly. "Please give me any trouble; I don't want to give you any at all."

So humbly and so sadly the poor girl answered that Mrs. Snell, despite the prejuge against personal beauty, turned sharply round with a lessony look in her eyes.

"I've lost you, and lost your mamma, Marion. It is true—"

If the sour and down-trodden woman had only been a little less awkward she would have opened her arms and made a friend for ever. She might have felt that Marion was thinking for a touch or a word of sympathy—a word of comfort with a woman, which, if not always the best, is still the most needed. But that is as much as to say that she might have spread her wings and flown over the moon.

"Yes," said Marion—if she said any word at all.

"That's a pity. Though it's true she had a bit of a nose, of course it's not so bad. And a precious big bee she must have had to marry Adam Furness—a regular bumble-bee."

"He is my father," said Marion.

"Oh, offence, I'm sure. Though I wouldn't be touchy about that, if he was mine. He was a coal merchant, and brought us up to tidy-ness though I durst you wouldn't think it, now. There. If you mind anything you've got accustomed to, take the hairbrush and hammer the floor; my room is just below."

Marion did miss a great many things; but she certainly had no notion of summoning back boisterous whose pale bearing seemed to indicate that she had been more than much more favorably impressed by the vaulted manners of her host, which seemed to her a trifles over-flowery. So she sat down on the edge of the creaking bedstead, and cried with all her heart and eyes.

At last, what sounded like a clattering of a pair of tongs upon a teatray warned her that she must return to the parlour. She had more than half a mind to plead a headache, and put her hat on; but her luggage had not yet arrived, so she had to leave the room.

If Marion had known through what sort of a house-hold she was to be sent, she would have been more satisfied.

Marion's threats of an箇iffle-lease of cold mutton were unrealized to a wailing degree.

Only her husband's occasional stoppages for parcels at the London shops could account for a table spread with bawdifully priced plates, the round tablecloth of cold things, displayed at a single view of peacock feathers, gauze geese's brains, sausages, oysters in their shells, Roquefort cheese, gauncy pie, various cakes, and chose know-all, with their chancery page to wash it down. The plates were cracked, the knives chipped, the forks and spoons of German silver, and that was nothing but a twisted pot, a cracked teacup, and a broken piece ornament for the change bag.

But one must have a moral objection to nightmares to quarrel with the two.

"I've these 'doo'ns, and big pots too," said Wyndham Snell, letting a cork fly, "and I've got a fine bottle of port wine, and all sorts of things are unbroken. That's all grammar, Miss Furness. I am a hyde-and-mud, and I tell you there's no more an animal enough to be fit to live, and what is to be done is to make him fit, and be a woman. Welcome to Elysphore Inn, Miss Furness. Julius, give Miss Furness a room, and I look after her."

ON EUROPEAN FARMING.

THE AGRICULTURE OF THE OLD COUNTRY COMPARED.

Although the acreage is small the yield is large—France, Flanders, Jersey and Guernsey—Cattle—Horse-houghs—Experiments with Feed.

The population increases, the earth does not grow larger; and although soil is now under cultivation which at one time was barren and unfruitful, there are the results of labor. This is the reason why A will eventually be compelled by a lack of the necessities of life. That the condition of agriculturists at the present time are uniformly bad in many parts of the world must be admitted. No matter what may be the natural fertility of the soil, or the methods of tillage, the outlook for the agriculturist is gloomy. In some places he works simply for the cost of production, and in others the State runs him with overhanding power, and when either or both steps in there work the money-lender steps in and enslaves him. In spite of all these obstacles, however, there are no wanting evidences that if the bonds were loosed, new agriculture should be broken his prospects might be materially brightened.

In a recent magazine article on the possible outcome of the Franco-Prussian war, it is pointed out, while the end of the last century the population of France has not increased even by 50 per cent., the peasants have nearly doubled the area under wheat and barley, from each acre, so as to increase their yield. The result is wheat grown in that country. In 1779, with a population of 27,000,000, there were 9,884,000 acres under wheat, yielding 37,000,000 bushels; while in 1885, with a population of 38,000,000, there were 17,000,000 acres, or 600,000, and the crop in bushels 511,619,000. The ratio of increase of the wheat crop during that period has therefore been 54 times greater than that of the increase of population. The increase has been caused mainly by successive taxation (+4 per cent. of the gross returns), military service, migration to cities, poverty of the peasantry, and other like drawbacks.

The district of Soissons, in East Flanders, contains 300,000 acres, and is said to support 30,000 inhabitants, all living by agriculture. The rents paid by the peasants are very low, and yet these peasants not only grow their own food, but they also export agricultural produce and pay rents up to $15 to $25 per acre. On an average, the land is easily cultivated and gives a good return. The bushels of wheat to the acre, or 73 bushels of oats, or 43 tons of best-root, besides keeping in the area 10,720 horned cattle, 890 sheep, 1815 horses and 6550 swine. While all this is done, the peasant is compelled by natural means to increase the productivity of the soil by still further increased irrigation. On the irrigated meadows of France six tons of hay to the acre are the rule, and near Milan, in the 22,000 acres of land irrigated, which are derived from the sewers of the city, yield a rate of crops from eight to ten tons of hay.

But it is when we come to consider what has been done by market gardening that we begin to realize the possibilities of the agriculture of the future. It was an argument of Hume's that all areas of ground planted with lawns would support as much life as thirty acres down with wild grass. The market gardeners near Paris pay as much as $120 per acre on the average; and this is a good test of the results obtained. The island of Jersey, with its 10,000 acres of chalk rocks included, has a population of about two persons to each acre. They grow 70,000 tons of potatoes each year, representing a money value of $2,000,000; they grow plenty of corn, and when they can't export every year, because an excess of stock or tools, dairy produce, some 1500 milk cows, and, on the whole, they obtain agricultural produce to the amount of $250 for each acre of the surface of the islands.

The neighboring Island of Guernsey is a land of market gardens, which have developed of late into greenhouse culture. There are 500 tons of grapes grown every year, representing a money value of $25,000; ordinary vegetables—tomatoes, potatoes, carrots, onions, etc.—are also grown, being also grown to a great extent. Everywhere there are glass houses which are open during the day throughout the spring, summer and autumn. Thus four of an acre covered with glass and heated in the spring will yield eight tons of tomatoes as a first crop in April and May, to follow by two more before the summer arrives.

To prevent insects from depositing their eggs upon plants when in blossom, spray the latter with a solution of one part of vinegar to ten parts of water. This treatment has given excellent results at the School of Agriculture.

Ripening cream does not mean ripening it. Cream that stands until the whey begins to separate is simply rotten cream, and butter made from it is spoiled beforehand, and of course has neither quality nor life. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The horse, like all other animals, will visit other orchards than his own as opportunity offers, says a writer. When he finds things better at home it inspires him to greater effort; when his own orchards appear the best it makes him feel satisfied and contented.

Mr. Samuel E. Green, in Farm and Fireside, says this upon the subject of mulching orchards: "The best mulch is a loose topsoil. Any material spread over the surface induces the small roots to come to the top, stimulates too fast fall growth, and damages the crop." Remove all surplus horse manure at the close of the hoey season if intended for market. Comb honey will become solid if left on the hives during the summer. The upper stories or surplus chambers should be left on the hives throughout the hot weather until feeding is done in the fall.

Look out for late swarms! The bees may be lacking in stores and are liable to swarm on the hives. They must be supplied with honey or united with other colonies. Also look out for queenless colonies at this time of the season. If colonies are left unquestionable time of robbers will destroy them.

It is not always the best and most elaborate plan to feed the horse the choicest stock. Success, however, mainly depends on warm, dry crops, with proper care, and a comfortable freedom from overworking. This latter trouble is often the cause of ill-success. If you have a healthy, sleek horse fed well in a pen.

Cheap Cow-Care. At the Massachusetts Experimenting Station fourteen different rations or combinations of food have been used in feeding milch cows during the past four years. The tests have been very accurate. The cost of the ration based on 22.75 lbs. of corn, 22.75 lbs. of wheat bran at $21, $15, and corn straw at $5 per ton. The cheapest feed consisted of 2% pounds each of corn-meal and wheat bran, 15% pounds each of whole-wheat and corn-stover, costing 15% cents for each cow daily.

The material value was about $\frac{1}{2}$ cents, so that the actual cost was 7% cents for the food for each cow. The next best ration contained one pound of nitro-glycerine meal (or lean meat substance) to six pounds of sugar and starch. The yield of milk was almost as satisfactory as when rations costing 25 to 30 cents per head daily was given. —N. Y. Christian Advocate.

CREASED IT ONCE.

I had been looking over the battle-fields around Marietta, Ga., and was five miles from the town, when a cracker came along with an ox and a cart and offered me a lift. After riding some distance I realized that both wheels were really in the need of grease, and asked him why he didn't lubricate.

"What for?" he asked.
"To make the card draw more easily."

"Sho! This 'ere ox don't mind."

"But it would stop the speaking."

"Yes, I reckon, but the squeakin' don't hurt."

"It would save your wheels," I finally decided.

"Sho! This 'ere card isn't with evin."

"Did you ever grease it?" I persisted.

"Once, A Yankee road to town with me and brought a box of stuff."

"Right off it went."

"Mighty slick, but we dun spread it on hoe and ate it all up in a week."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS:—Are you disturbed at night by brooks? Are you afraid to sleep? Do you dream of your babies? Do you dream of your babies?

It is astonishing how rapidly the feeble and debilitated gain strength and vigor when taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. For what is called "broken-down" constitutions, nothing else has proved so effective as this particular but perfectly safe medicine.

My little sister, four years of age, was given Ayer's Sarsaparilla to help her sleep. She had given up hope of getting relief. Our family physician, a skillful man and large experience pronounced it useless. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to be well again. Her appetite was out of danger. We continue giving Ayer's Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me boundless faith in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I can assure you it is confidential to my customers. —G. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throats are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy.

It strengthens the vocal organs, relieves irritation, and prevents the inmates of Convalescent Homes in every stage of their dread disease.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral removes coughs and cures bronchitis and laryngitis.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have found it to be the best remedy for cough, and for those cases where the voice has been subduced," —A. U. Carter, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have experience of over thirty years in the management of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the most remarkable effects of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty years ago, when its great success was attained through its various forms."

The Rathbone Company are the authorized agents of the Canada Salt Association for this section of Ontario. They sell salt by the car load, barrel or bulk.

Alex. Moon, whose arm was so badly cut at the Cedar Mill, is rapidly recovering. The attending physician thinks that he will retain the full use of his arm.

Mr. Heaton, M.P., for Canterbury has been interviewing Sir John Macdonald in the interest of a penny postage between all the English speaking countries.

More than 500 vessels of all classes have passed through the Murray canal this season. Next year will undoubtedly show a greater number pass through than this.

Mr. P. H. Gobin, a partridge about the size of a pheasant, was shot by the timberman, and Mr. E. Dwyer skinned it. It is an unusual thing for partridges to fly near dwellings.

Mr. James Gault has purchased a new two seated carriage to add to his livery. The carriage was purchased from Mr. R. Wringer, of Picton, and took the first prize at the Picton fair.

Mr. Varine, Mrs. Bentler and Miss Cronk, of the Society of Friends, of Bloomfield, are visiting the services in the Methodist church, on Sunday. Both services were very interesting and large audiences greeted the ladies.

Inspector Slattery of weights and measures was in town on Saturday and visited the market where he found short measures which he destroyed. He also compelled some parties to have their scales and天平校正ed. He is an efficient officer.

Mrs. Dalton is already making preparation for an extensive display of millinery this fall. She has secured the services of a first class milliner, a leading wholesale dealer in Toronto and will be able to satisfy all in the future, as far as the past, who trust her with their patronage.

Several of the leading manufacturers of agricultural machinery have decided to forego the custom of exhibiting their manufactures at fall fairs and have so instructed their agents. They find in newspaper advertising a more judicious method of bringing their machinery before the farming community.

Look out for bogus quarters. The city of Toronto has been flooded recently, and many of them have found their way into the country. They may be detected by the ring, and also on account of the edge not being perfectly milled. They are not easily used to anyone, and parties attempting to pass them are liable to be placed under arrest.

On the last instant the law making it a misdemeanor for boys under 16 years of age to use tobacco in any form on the streets or public places in the state of New York went into effect. This law, though partially good, may not be all right, but it will never quite equal in efficiency the paternal knee and a judiciously handled shingle.

Mr. W. W. Carter has removed what remained of the building after the fire on the corner of Main and Third street, and will immediately put up a two story brick building 40x60 feet which will contain his market and two tenements. His market stands about one-fourth of the ground floor. He will put in a first-class refrigerator for the preservation of his meats.

The Salvation Army gave a farewell to Capt. Cardiff and Lieut. Davidson, on Sunday night. The service was a very interesting one and much interest was manifested. The two officers proceeded to Toronto on Monday to explore the formation of the 10th anniversary of the founding of the army in Canada. They will soon be stationed in new fields of labor. They leave with the best wishes of a large number of people who are desirous of their prosperity and a continuance of their usefulness.

Mr. Albert Dolman assisted the bridegroom with Miss Anna Van Slyck was bridegroom. Rev. Mr. Peak of Marvin, was the officiating clergyman. A large company of relatives and friends were present. The presents to the bride were numerous and varied. The newlyweds couple left on the evening train for a trip west.

Death of Mrs. Moore.

This is the season of fare, from the great exhibition founded in Toronto, to the most modest, but by no means the unimportant, township show. All these serve a purpose more or less important, fair in amount. It is hard to calculate the good to an observer farmer. It is an object lesson that at once appeals to the eye and brain. To see what a neighbor or friend can or cannot do is an incentive to emulation.

The Trenton fair has been postponed until the 2nd and 3rd of October on account of the wet weather of last week.

The Reliance, Capt. Doughty, made the trip from Osgoode, last Friday, in seven hours. This is the fastest train on record.

A VISIT TO MANITOBA.NOTES AT THE WAY.

No more pleasant summer trip, can, perhaps be enjoyed than that in the pleasures of which your correspondent recently made his tour, involving his visit to that highly favoured Bay of Quinte to that great Prairie Province in the West, which under the name of Manitoba is, yearly, becoming more and more popular, not only in the United States, but in all countries of the Outer World as a most attractive and promising home for the intending emigrant, desirous of sharing in the fortunes of a new land, and in a field of enterprise. Such will be the striking impress produced in the travellers mind by a visit to Manitoba while the sight of its wide and fertile plains will not do at once call to mind the glowing scenes of the prairies of America. It was later days notably Lord Dufferin painted the future of Manitoba and the N.W. territories. Predictions which the writer of to-day can hardly doubt are even more favourable towards their fulfilment. As chief or Main street is a wide and magnificent thoroughfare, while the public buildings of Winnipeg would do credit to any city in the Dominion, but so far as the author is concerned, about this capital as to render further notice unnecessary, especially as ere drawing this sketch to an end, some remarks must be made upon the agricultural resources of Manitoba, which as every one knows will ever be the foundation of the prosperity of the province.

In order to properly appreciate its farming capabilities one must enjoy, I think, the privilege which has fallen to the writer's lot of travelling over the prairie lands of the West, being the most appropriate way to make the visitor towards their fallibilities. The name Manitoba is generally regarded as being derived from the Ojibway words, Manitou, Great Spirit, and Waab, straits between hills. The tourist, on his way to Manitoba, desirous of variety in scenery—cannot do better we think than choose the lake route, being the general highway.

We pass through prairies. Having made this selection, we left Toronto by rail at mid-day and passing on by Orangeville through a rolling country well timbered, and in parts exhibiting good farms, we reached the prairie, and, with a few well-dressed water forms a magnificent roadstead, and makes it the favorite point of departure for Manitoulin Island and all places on the Georgian Bay, of which it is the chief port.

The traveller, taking one of the mail boats, which is a steamer called (affording passage between Lakes Huron and Superior) is reached. There is a flourishing town on the American on the "British" side while the latter will no doubt receive increased impetus when the Canadian grain train now in operation through the magnificient American soil (said to be the finest in the world) shall have been diverted into our own canal, at present in course of construction. At this point, the C. P. "Soos" Railway, which diverges from the main transcontinental, is built across the prairie, thus giving connection with St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and other American centres of commerce.

What changes have here taken place in the system of transportation, what triumphs have human genius gained over nature's opposing force, since Jesuit Missionaries, more than two centuries and a half ago with many a toilsome portage pushed their adventurous way through these upland lakes to the sea? We quickly pass to the bridge or canal, we quickly pass or readily sail around the intervening barrier. But to resume our voyage. The Sault is passed; we have entered and are now crossing that wild waste waters of Lake Superior. In gaining this illimitable expanse, what food for reflection the prospect of sea and sky afford. Little wonder to the untutored mind of the aborigines, it should have appeared as a Deity to be adored. What changes have here taken place in the art of navigation and what a world of boundless vista of water伸展したがわの世界) is the sunset of that August evening. All night we steam our course across the mighty waters internally congratulating ourselves that the "stormy wind" of the "soos" has not marred the voyage over this long and bounded sea! For one could not help surmising how rudely the average Landman's lumber would be disturbed, on such an Ocean lake as the sudden appearance of a "stir Nor'wester"! But the Sault is passed and on to us the Thunder Cape coming in sight. At the eastern entrance of Thunder Bay it stands like some huge sentinel to bar the way, or as it were to protect the fabulous treasure which a long lay concealed in the famous Silvertown behind it. To the west stand the 20 miles of the rocky and craggy upland known as Michay's mountain meets the eye, while a third huge rock called Pie Island, lies at the entrance to the Bay. Passing by these steep giants the heroes of many a Indian legend are to us the Port Arthur formerly called Prince Arthur. It is needless to add the town is picturesquely situated and will doubtless become a fashionable watering place for the tourists of the summer. After trudging along in a westerly direction and with much of Manitoulin, it is rather startling to reflect that I am still within the bounds of Ontario, though over 700 miles from its capital! But we are taking a long and hasty look at the altered demands of travel. The fur house of the old fort (it is said) is at present used as an Engine House for the great coal docks, and some of the largest grain elevators in the world overshadow all surrounding buildings.

From this point to Winnipeg the railway may be said to traverse a wild unbroken region of rock diversified with many beautiful lakes and flowing rivers a region undoubtedly containing some valuable forests and probably much mineral wealth but at present the country is practically uninhabited and its resources, (whatever they be) yet unknown. In some of the streams which the railway follows and which enter the Kaministikwa leaps from a height exceeding that of Niagara. The next point of interest which may be referred to is Rat Portage, the important town situated on the charming Lake of the Woods, with large body of water completely studded with islands and forming a delightful resort for fishermen and pleasure-seeking parties from the United States.

The lake borders through a narrow rocky ridge of land at Kewatin fall into the Winnipeg River. This splendid natural water power has been utilized to good purpose, as the great Kewatin falls, with daily capacity of 1200 barrels, attests.

But a few hours more by rail and we strike the Red River and with it the first appearance of a prairie town. About 20 miles from Winnipeg is East Selkirk (originally the name of a city!) from this point the reader will follow me with wonder as to the wonderful city of the west, thenceforward in rapid growth, is reached. In 1870 Fort Garry, as it was then called, was only the modest trading village that Captain Bond had in his power known as "the great lone land," to-day it is a large city, the main source of supply for the whole North West and fast becoming an important centre of trade.

Sixty-five years ago Emma Rudge was arrested in Hartford, Conn., for selling ice to the doctors of the city had a good living and also a handsome competence.

In addition to the above, there is a fine fifty hardiness and full kernel is a specialty of a spinney iron bridge, thus giving connection with the Canadian N. W.'s oats, barley, maize, millet and native grasses in great variety as seen at the Government Experimental Farm at Brandon, are the staple products of the prairie. The soil is composed of a kind of roots which specially flourish in this virgin soil. While the small fruits found in gardens are indigenous to Manitoba with many added varieties of berries. In many parts of the country timber belts, containing the ash, aspen, maple, scrub oak, willow and elm abound, thus relieving the somewhat monotonous character of the treeless plain.

To all such as feel compelled through any necessity of fortune to leave fair Ontario, we wish to find cheap and good farm sites and opportunities for employment, we may say before settling elsewhere, do not fail of visiting Manitoba and view its golden seas of bearded grain. We doubt if any other part of the world can show better yields per equal area of land and, further, you will find few or no many objections alleged against this province, for example, the severity of the winter, the scarcity of water, the lack of fuel, &c. Well, so far as can be gathered from the experience of those who live there, the soil is as rich as any in the world and the objections do not really apply, or if we are any the wiser are they being overcome, or only awaiting their removal by the building of a few additional practical inexhaustible deposits of limestone. It is in and off the confines of the province itself that we conclude, this will certainly be the verdict of the most cursory observer:—The climate is healthy and invigorating, the country well governed, law, education and religion exerting a powerful influence on the people. The people are frank and open, and their manners are picture perfect. The Kewatin falls are to us the greatest waterfall in the world, and the falls of the Mississippi are not to be compared with them.

LOCAL ITEMS.

There was large markets on Saturday and Tuesday.

The passenger traffic on the G. T. R. this week has been very heavy.

The steamer Alexandria took 800 barrels of apples and 76 barrels of plums to Rochester on her trip last week.

The mail line of steamers between Toronto and Montreal will go into winter quarters at the end of this month.

Granaries should be ventilated, if for no other reason than that the granary weevil, which destroyed large quantities of grain, is very easily killed by cold.

Miss Ada Lake has purchased the millinery business of Miss Wartman and will continue the business in the rooms recently occupied by Miss Wartman.

The parties that carried off some of Mrs. Warren's things on the night of the fire are known, and it is best that they bring them back to the house and save themselves trouble.

The Resolute arrived in Penetanguishene on Monday evening having encountered terrible winds in Lake Huron and having to put back to port, so severe was the gale.

A special meeting of Court Deseronto, No. 93, I. O. F., will be held next Wednesday evening. A full attendance is desired as business of great importance will come up.

That fall wheat may escape the attack of the Hessian fly and wheat stem maggot, Professor Fletcher advises the delaying of the sowing until after the third week in September.

Mr. Johnson, S. P. L., has issued a circular to the teachers of South Hastings informing them that as of October 1st, Sept. 24th, is children's day at the Quinte Fair, all schools may be closed on that day.

Don't fail to see the display of Bell pianos and organs at the Belleville fair. Mr. H. Bull will be on charge with able assistants and a rich treat musically will be given all who take in this part of the exhibition.

Mr. R. K. Huff, clarinetist of the Citizens' Band, played with the Picton band at Kingston fair and also with the Oddfellows band of Belleville at the same fair. He will accompany the Oddfellows band to Toronto.

With a mysterious moving light on the street a market is left in doubt, but by the sea serpent of Bell Island it can be obtained, there is without question a future for Deseronto, and the Bay shores should be crowded with summer resort cottages next season. Look out for a boom in real estate along the shore.

This part of Edmund street used by the market is left in a most wretched condition each market day. Hot fruit and vegetables, stalks, corn husks and rubbish abound. The street committee should have it cleaned up or see that those who leave it in such a disgraceful condition attend to it.

A well known grain buyer was seen going down Main street the other day with a large mush melon under his arm, and a lady on either side of him. The melon was a fine one, we are told, but obtained in a manner which did not seem right.

The various colored flags which adorned the High school last Saturday were the handkerchiefs of the victorious ball nine. Their joy knew no bounds, and such excitement prevailed that the flag rope was pulled loose and it was with considerable difficulty regained. The boys lost their handkerchiefs but they don't care, they won the game.

Tyndinaga Fair.

The Tyndinaga Agricultural Society are making all preparations possible for a great show and fair to be held on Saturday. Entries are already coming in and the prospects are better than in former years for a large exhibit of farm produce. The cattle exhibit we are informed is sure to exceed that of any year.

The High School.

The gymnasium at the High School is in a most complete shape having had a platform built in it for calisthenic exercises. They consist of a chest exercising apparatus, trapeze, horizontal bar, rings, vaulting poles, dumb bells, clubs, etc. The large and commodious room in the basement is used for the exercises and good results are sure to follow.

The Car Works.

The Deseronto Car Works have commenced on an order of fifty grain cars for the C. P. R. and are turning out two each day. They are also to build a new kind of platform roller car to be used about the yards with which the grain is handled. These are made with a turning platform on which are rollers so that a load of lumber will be pushed off the car in a moment, thereby not detaining the car or the loss of time in loading each piece.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

Wednesday evening the choir and a number of the members of the Methodist Sunday School were invited to the residence of Mr. A. A. Richardson where they were most agreeably entertained. During the evening Mr. G. A. MacInnes, Vice Principal, Mr. Wartman and Miss Lake made a presentation of a handsome opal ring. The address was signed by Mr. Wm. Thurgelund on behalf of the choir, and by Mr. A. A. Richardson on behalf of the Sunday School. A number of these presents were given by the students in which Miss Wartman was head by all and the less substituted by the church in her leaving town. The following is the address.

MISS WARTMAN.—We the members of the Methodist choir hope with the Superintendent of the Sabbath School desire, on this occasion to express our regret that we are unable to present you with a gift in return for the services of the students in which Miss Wartman was head by all and the less substituted by the church in her leaving town. The following is the address.

A DISASTROUS FLOOD.

We take the following from the Utica Herald, Sept. 13th. It will prove of interest as it will relate to a number of Deserontians who are located in Lowell town. Great excitement has prevailed over Lowell, N. Y., since eight o'clock Friday evening. Rain fell in torrents nearly all night, and the Mill creek, which overflowed its banks at the head of Valley street, and terraced water swept through the street. William D. Austin who owned a house on the north side of the creek, had barely time to remove his family to the house. He carried his wife from the house when the water was nearly to his waist.

Willis McHenry, an employee of Mr. Austin, had retired, and Paul Sunderland helped him to dress. By the time they left the house the water had raised to such a depth that the tide had reached the bridge, and they were driven home. Fortunately they reached a fence post, and a general alarm was sounded for assistance. Steadily the water rose, and despite the efforts of the citizens to hold it with ropes, they were compelled to let it pass. Sunderland's strength gave out, and he was swept down stream. The current however, was strong, and when he was again above the fence post, he was pulled ashore. The rescuing party later reached McHenry, who still clung to the fence post, and he was safely landed on the shore.

Nearly the entire length of Valley street, is cut off from the rest of the town, and most of the inhabitants have left their houses. The water soon receded and the worst was over. Hughes, Horton & Blackman's foundry and shop was almost entirely submerged, and the electric light works was also partially under water. Several houses on Valley street were started from their foundations, but none carried downstream. Two or three barns were, however, washed away. The timber and iron portion of the tannery belonging to Hiram Crowley, in the northern part of the town, was carried along. This struck the flume at A. M. Stein's grist mill, and carried it away. The mill proper was also quite badly damaged, and components of the building that were not submerged by the rushing torrent, were carried downstream. A large log which had been stuck in the middle of the street, was carried along by the flood, and when it struck a bridge, the bridge gave way, cutting the course of the river. A large log was carried across the river, and lodged between a barn and an elm tree. There were seven people in the house at the time, but all escaped. Logs, timber and brush wood formed dam at the bridge, cutting the course of the river, and causing a log jam. From a resident we have received the following account of the flood:

Mill creek runs through the lower part of the town for about one mile, and is partially dammed, and the electric light works was also partially under water. Several houses on Valley street were started from their foundations, but none carried downstream. Two or three barns were, however, washed away. The timber and iron portion of the tannery belonging to Hiram Crowley, in the northern part of the town, was carried along. This struck the flume at A. M. Stein's grist mill, and carried it away.
